THE SEWER PUZZLE.

OPINIONS OF NUMEROUS PROMINENT CITIZENS.

Some Strong Legal Objections Against Discharging Sewage Into the Sea—Has the Southern Pacific Any Right to Give a Right of Way?—Opinions on Every Side.

A number of interviews obtained by Times reporters from prominent citizens on the red-hot topic of Los Angeles sewerage are given below:

HON. GEORGE W. KNOX.

Hon. George W. Knox, the attorney and ex-Assemblyman, being asked for his views on the sewer question, gave them, in writing, as follows:

The City Council, at its meeting on Monday last, adopted the plans and profiles of a sewer system, including an outfall sewer from the city limits at Jefferson street to the ocean, at Ballona, the cost of the outfall sewer alone to be $440,000. From this it is to be considered that the requisite steps will now be taken for submitting to the voters of the city the proposition as to whether they will vote in favor of an issue of bonds to build the sewer system, and the outfall sewer, as proposed. That the general sewer system proposed for the city by Mr. Eaton is a wise one, will no doubt be accepted without protest by all; but that the outfall sewer as proposed by him is equally wise, is an open question, and upon the policy of it we are at liberty to disagree. In the first place, from Jefferson street to Ballona Junction, it is proposed to lay the sewer upon the right of way of the Southern Pacific Railroad, and that company has graciously given the city a grant of the right for that purpose. It is a doubtful question whether the railroad company can give such a grant, or if the grant be given conveys any right. The right of way for the railroad was originally obtained by the Los Angeles and Independence Railroad, and was, as I have been informed, exclusively for a right of way to build its railroad. The courts have rigidly held that such a grant is an easement for that special purpose, and have enjoined railroads from permitting the right of way to be used for other purposes. The Southern Pacific Railroad Company has a lease only of the Los Angeles and Independence road, and it has no other or further rights than were granted to its lessor. It is a question therefore to be determined, whether such a grant to the city from the Southern Pacific carries any right whatever. If not, then the cost of the purchase of the right of way for the outfall sewer from Jefferson street to Ballona Junction would about double the estimate made, or about $880,000. But this is only the mildest of the objections to be urged against the outfall sewer. It is to open into the ocean at Ballona, and the sewerage is to be there discharged.

The question therefore will next arise, will such deposit be a nuisance? "Anything which is injurious to health, or indecent, or offensive to the senses, or an obstruction to the free use of property, so as to interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of life or property, is a nuisance and the subject of an action. Such action may be brought by any person whose property is injuriously affected, or whose personal enjoyment is lessened by the nuisance, and by the judgment the nuisance may be enjoined or abated, as well as damages recovered." Such is the law of this State (see Sec. 751, Code of Civil Procedure). Now, the city will seriously contend that the sewerage deposit in the Bay of Santa Monica at Ballona will not be a nuisance under the above definition of the law, for the sewerage deposited anywhere south of the town of Santa Monica will be swept by the waves along up the entire beach, and be deposited on the sand along its whole extent. It will not be swept out to sea, because there is no under-current or under-tow at that coast. This is demonstrated by the following facts: When the builders of the foothills railroad about a year ago received the ties for the road, they were brought by schooner to the Bay of Santa Monica, but there being no lighterage facilities there they were dumped from the schooner (about a mile out from shore) into the ocean. Many of these were wet with sap, and sunk to the bottom, but within a month thereafter out of a total of about 26,000 ties, all but about 500 were washed up on to the beach, and the waves of the sea strike the shore at a slight angle, and constantly wash northward along the beach. Let the bather go out into the surf, and keep constantly afloat, and he will find that he is drawn northward involuntarily. This suction from the ocean toward the shore, and this pushing movement northward along the beach, will absolutely stultify every effort to carry the sewerage out to sea from Santa Monica Bay, and will cause the sewerage to be deposited like a crust along the entire water line of the beach, utterly ruining it forever.

This loss would be a serious one, not alone to Santa Monica, but it would be a detriment to Los Angeles city that at present is incapable of just estimate. Travelers who have been at every bathing resort on the Pacific Coast, and the Atlantic Coast as well, Europeans who have visited all the famous seaside resorts of Europe, all unite in the statement that the surf bathing of Santa Monica is unrivaled on either continent, while winter bathing there presents attractions that cannot be found elsewhere. Now, the deposit of the sewerage of this city into Santa Monica Bay at any point means the entire destruction of that bay for bathing purposes. This, then, would be a nuisance of such gigantic proportions as would unhesitatingly let loose the injunctions of the courts of justice and preposterously enjoin the proposed deposit of the sewerage waters into the ocean from the beach.

The law of this matter is not open for a moment's serious doubt. The law books are full of decisions that sewerage may not be dumped into water courses or bodies, so as to contaminate them, or the atmosphere about them, to the detriment or injury of the public. It may as well be known in advance now by the city of Los Angeles, that the citizens of Santa Monica will exhaust every legal resource to defeat this proposition. And they will succeed, because they have the law on their side. The suit now pending before Judge McKinley of the Superior Court, and which I am now prosecuting, only involved the question of certain property-owners on Ocean avenue, in Santa Monica, claiming their sewerage and dumping it into cesspools covered with earth at the foot of the bluff on the beach. This suit is brought to estop the smells and sewer gas escaping and poisoning the air at that place, and while that is a nuisance so far as it goes, yet it does not concern the water front of the ocean, and upon this proposition even the property-owners on Ocean avenue would stand solidly together to prevent the destruction of their sea beach and bathing resorts.

The question then as to the disposal of our sewerage is too serious to laugh off until we are restrained and brought to a standstill by order of the court. We have to dispose of it somewhere. Then, where will it do the least damage? The direction of Ballona will not do. The ground is damp, and does not require it for surface irrigation in that direction. It seems obvious then that it should be taken where it can be utilized for surface irrigation, and where it will be as remote from the thickly-settled suburbs of the city as possible. The bed of the Los Angeles River has been suggested as an outlet, and the vicinity of Florence as a suitable place for a sewage farm. This might, perhaps, suggest less opposition and less damage than any other route (for any route taken will occasion loss, damage and opposition); but this question must be settled by dispassionate discussion, and regard for the best interests of all. Possibly a commission of five of our most disinterested public men (not machine politicians) might better solve this question by the satisfaction of all concerned than to leave it to solve itself.

JUDGE H. K. S. O'MELVENY.

"My platform is this: "First—The city must have sewerage.

"Second—The system should be built commensurate with the present and future growth of the city.

"Third—There should be an outlet to the sea for the excess of flow.

"Fourth—The city should mind its own business, and let other people take care of theirs. If there is sewerage that can be used outside the city, arrange it so that it can be taken out by people who want it. I am opposed to the city's making any plants, let the outsiders do that themselves."

MAJ. GEORGE H. BONEBRAKE.

"We must have a sewer system, and I want to see it headed towards the ocean. I would like to see the sewerage used for fertilizing and irrigation purposes if possible, but if it cannot be so used, then run it out into the sea at such a point that it will not prove offensive to any one. Our sea coast towns must not be damaged. This city has grown so large that we must have a thorough sewer system as soon as possible."

GEORGE A. DOBSON.

"I think that a plan should be adopted looking to the utilization of the sewerage. It is a very easy matter to empty it into the sea, but such a course would ultimately entail the waste of thousands of dollars that could be saved. If, however, an outfall should be adopted it should be carried through a country where the greatest benefit could be given to the dry lands benefited. From my personal observation I can say that it seems almost impossible to so control an outfall sewer as to prevent a nuisance where it discharges. Any one who is familiar with the condition of the Thames, where it is and the receptacle of London sewage, can confirm this."

WALTER S. MOORE.

"The sewerage of this city is too valuable to be emptied into the sea. We can save it for fertilizing purposes, and I am confident that the cost will not be so great as building an outfall sewer. It is easy enough to talk about running the outfall sewer into the sea, but property-owners along the coast can and will make it very warm for us should we attempt anything of the kind. We can run the liquid into the sea and save the solids."

I. H. POLK.

"I am strongly in favor of a sewer at any cost. This city has reached a point where we must have a sewer system, and I don't care where it goes as long as we get it out of town. I believe the only way to solve the problem is to build an outfall sewer to the sea and let Nature take her course."

A BUNCH OF HERALD INTERVIEWS.

The interviews upon the sewer question published in yesterday's Herald are very much to the point. A synopsis of the views obtained is given, as follows:

H. Jevne, the grocer, said that he was opposed to running the sewer to the ocean. He thinks the sewerage is too valuable for irrigation and fertilization of the land below the city to be wasted. He gave it as his judgment that the bonds for an outfall sewer will not carry, but will be voted down.

E. E. Hall, owner of Angeleno Heights, was very unwilling to give his views, but said that the city does not need an outfall sewer to the ocean at this time, at a cost of ten miles of conduit, when the city can well be used in the irrigation of lands between it and the ocean. The sewerage is too valuable, with thousands and tens of thousands of acres crying for it. In times of heavy rain the surplus can be run into God's own conduit, the river bed. The Ballona plan is contrary to common sense and to Nature, which has made an outfall for all the storm-water of the district by the river channel.

The expense of the Ballona plan is enormous in the present dull times. Mr. Hall also believes that the Ballona route is in the wrong direction, right in the teeth of the prevailing winds, which will blow all the stench back to the city. Mr. Hall said that all the bonds are voted he will put up all he can to fight it with the people of Santa Monica, but he believes the bonds will be voted down.

Ex-Chief of Police J. F. Burns believes that the bonds for an outfall sewer will be voted down by the people.

J. G. Estudillo said that he thinks the bonds will be very generally opposed by the more responsible people of the city. The lack of confidence in the City Council as a whole, and its municipal policy, will do a great deal to defeat the passage of the bonds. He believed the sewerage can be deodorized and made perfectly safe for use by the modern systems.

W. W. Gilbert took exactly the opposite view from his partner, Mr. Estudillo. He thinks the bonds will carry, and wants the sewer to the ocean and to Ballona. He believes the sewerage cannot be used anywhere without becoming a nuisance.

J. W. Felt believes the city needs an outlet only in times of heavy rains. At other times the sewerage will be and ought to be used for irrigation. He likes the Ballona route as far as he understands it.

Maj. J. R. Toberman is in favor of an outfall sewer and in favor of its going to the sea under proper conditions, but is opposed to the present plans. He thinks it would be better to build the inner sewer system first, and when that is completed build the outfall sewer. While the city wants at once to sewer itself and get rid of the waste from the backyards of the people. He favors segregating the plans and voting bonds now for the inner system, and does not favor any cast-iron plan to go by for a future date. He does not think the Council has any right to bargain away forever 50 inches of sewer for right of way over Mr. Rose's land, or the moral right to pay the sum of $10,000 for a piece of land not worth that much. Mr. Toberman favors a running of the sewer to the southeast rather than to the southwest. He would extend the present system needed, and run the surplus into the river bed. All the sewerage that can be saved for irrigation should be so disposed of, and no sewerage should be wasted. The city can derive a large revenue from the sale of the sewerage. In time of heavy rain the storm water goes naturally to the sea by the river-bed and the sewerage can take the same course. If it is piped below Compton the floods will do the rest. Mr. Toberman approves the plans of Mr. Eaton for the internal system of the city.

E. T. Wright, civil-engineer, says he wants sewerage so badly, will favor any plan to get it. He does not think Santa Monica can enjoy an outfall. He has no opinion as to the probability of the bonds carrying.

W. W. Robinson, Mayor's clerk, wants to see the sewer run built run to the ocean at some point; then the city will be able to sell the sewerage for irrigation, as it will not be at the mercy of any one or any tide.

James Cameron, third the sewerage will never be dumped at Ballona, and that it will cost a great deal to build a viaduct to carry the sewer across the Gun Club's slough and across Ballona Lake. The lake is 200 ft wide and 10 feet deep, and it is a niggable arm of the Pacific Ocean. No one will be allowed to obstruct the lake. The swamp inside the big sand dune is about a mile across, and it will cost a great deal to carry the sewer on piles across it. The piles must be well creosoted or the teredo will destroy the piles in a year.

Dr. John S. Griffin considers the proposition to vote so large a sum to wasting the sewerage a crazy one. The sewerage should be used and not wasted. If ex-Mayor Workman, with Mayor, had not intervened, the sewerage could have been handled for nothing, and probably made a source of revenue to the city.

Col. A. B. Hotchkiss considers the project of the Council impractical.

SPIKES, THE CUTTER.

Overhauled at Bakersfield by Constable Tibbets.

Tom Spikes, the negro gambler who cut the white man, William Roberts, in a fight on New High street, Wednesday night, was captured yesterday afternoon at Bakersfield. Spikes stayed around the city until some time Friday, when he got out on a freight train. The police were hot on his trail, and would have got him Thursday night but for the fact that they were given a wrong direction, and missed him by about a block. Notices had, however, been sent out giving a description of the man, and he was nailed by Constable Tibbets, who has gained something of a reputation as a thief-catcher, at Bakersfield, a telegram having been received at police headquarters to this effect yesterday afternoon. Chief Glass will send an officer to Bakersfield to bring Spikes back.

Roberts, the man who was cut, is improving, and is unable to get around without assistance. He will recover with ordinary care and prudence.

The White Caps' Case.

The trial of the San Pedro "White Caps" was resumed yesterday morning, and several more witnesses were examined for the defense. The testimony was directed to the two points of proving an alibi for the defendants and proving the bad character of Gus Brecken and James Odell. At noon Judge McKinley continued the case until Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

Small Fire.

Last evening about 7 o'clock an alarm of fire was turned in, caused by the burning of some hay in the barn of Hon. Foindexter Dunn, at the corner of West End avenue and Adams street. The blaze was extinguished before any serious damage was done.

Knights of Robert Emmet.

The Knights of Robert Emmet gave a social at their hall in the McDonald block, on Main street, last evening. The feature of the entertainment was the presentation of a fine portrait of Robert Emmet to the lodge.

CAPT. HARRIS AND COMMISSIONER KNOX TALK.

A Personal Difficulty in the Chief of Police's Office—Capt. Harris Thinks Knox is No Gentleman, and Offers to Pull His Nose.

There was considerable excitement for a short time yesterday morning at the police station, over a personal difficulty that took place in the Chief's office between Police Commissioner Knox and ex-Capt. Emil Harris, growing out of a remark made by Maj. Knox in a published interview at the time of Capt. Harris's removal, to the effect that he (Knox) did not consider him (Harris) a proper man to be captain of the police, but without giving any reason. Capt. Harris stated at the time of the interview that he intended to demand an explanation from Maj. Knox, but they did not come together, and it was generally thought that the matter had been dropped. Yesterday morning, however, the Police Commissioners held a special meeting at Mr. Lindley's office for the purpose of approving the pay-roll, which matter had been overlooked at the last meeting. Maj. Knox acted as secretary pro tem., and after the meeting, went over to the station with the pay-roll to have certain changes made by the secretary. Capt. Harris was also in the office removing some private effects from a desk that he had used while on the force, and when Maj. Knox concluded his business, he went into the Chief's private office, where there were quite a number of persons, among them being Mr. Myers, Capt. Roberts, Councilman Theo. Summerland, Detective Wallin and others. When he concluded his business, Capt. Harris asked Chief Glass's permission to go into his office, which was granted, the Chief thinking that he wanted to get something that belonged to him. Capt. Harris walked in, and, taking a seat opposite Maj. Knox, asked him if he would make an explanation of his remark concerning him, which Maj. Knox declined to do, saying that he had merely exercised his prerogative as a commissioner, and voted for his removal, and asked Capt. Harris if he came into the office to pick a quarrel with him. Capt. Harris disclaimed any such intention, and after some further words, told Maj. Knox that he was no gentleman, and that he would pull his nose the first time he met him on the street, saying that he (Knox) was no match for him physically, but that he would give him any satisfaction that he wanted from a stick up.

By this time, Chief Glass, who had been attracted by the noise, came into the office, and told Capt. Harris that he must have no further quarrel, and if he had any idea that such a thing would have happened, he should have forbidden him to come in. Capt. Harris then left the office, Maj. Knox following, and when they got out into the main office, the quarrel was again renewed. Capt. Harris saying that he would raise no disturbance in the station, but that he should pull Knox's nose the first time he met him on the streets. According to some of those present, Maj. Knox thrust his face forward toward Capt. Harris, and told him to break his nose, and afterward house also stated that he died of inflammation of the bowels, although the condition of the body does not indicate this. He also had one or two doctors, and the prescriptions given by them were also found.

The body was removed to Orr & Sutch's, on Spring street, and Justice Savage notified, who will hold the inquest in the absence of Coroner Meredith, who is at Catalina. The jury was sworn, when the body was viewed and an adjournment taken until 10 o'clock this morning, in order to have a post mortem and get the witnesses.

MAJ. KNOX WAS ALSO SEEN AT HIS RESIDENCE last evening, and when asked about the affair, said that he did not care to talk about it, as it was purely a personal matter between himself and Capt. Harris, and he did not believe in ventilating such matters in the newspapers. He said that he did not anticipate any further trouble, and was sorry that anything of the kind had occurred. He was at the police station in his official capacity, and he did not know what Capt. Harris had put himself in a position to give any attempt to intimidate an officer, as the statutes were especially severe in matters of this kind. He certainly should take no further notice of the matter unless it was forced upon him.

ANOTHER LITTLE ROW.

Yesterday afternoon a fight occurred between T. E. Rowan, Jr., and Maj. W. R. Burke, at the latter's office on Spring street, opposite the courthouse. The gentlemen had some words on the street about the payment of a bill, when Mr. Rowan went with Maj. Burke to see the receipt. Some words passed between them, in which the lie was given by Maj. Burke, when Mr. Rowan grabbed him by the throat and threw him against the partition. The Major, it is said, drew his pocket knife, but the parties were separated before any damage was done. There were no arrests.

"OLD BILL JUSTICE"

Dies of Lockjaw, Caused by a Hurt and Disposition.

William Justice, better known as "Old Bill Justice," for many years a well-known character about town, died at his residence at No. 108 Lazard street yesterday afternoon about 2 o'clock under rather peculiar circumstances. On the afternoon of the 14th inst., following the celebration by the French citizens of the fall of the Bastille, Justice was said to have had a fight with a man at the corner of Aliso and Vignes streets. At any rate, he had a wound on the side of his head, which had been caused either with a knife or some other instrument, and this was the way he accounted for it. Justice took no care of himself, not even washing the blood off, but continued in his usual way, drinking beer and getting drunk as often as the opportunity presented itself. In a few days he was taken sick, and went to bed. The story about the fight was brought up, and the police authorities began investigating it. Justice grew worse, and finally lockjaw set in, it was said. At any rate he died yesterday afternoon, at the same place, but before his death he told Officer Bowler, who had the case in charge, that he fell down and hurt his head, and that he invented the story about the fight to account for it. The officer questioned him closely, but he insisted that he was telling the truth, and Officer Bowler, if he thought that he would tell a lie in the condition in which he was. One of the women in the

The body was removed to Orr & Sutch's, on Spring street, and Justice Savage notified, who will hold the inquest in the absence of Coroner Meredith, who is at Catalina. The jury was sworn, when the body was viewed and an adjournment taken until 10 o'clock this morning, in order to have a post mortem and get the witnesses.

MAJ. KNOX WAS ALSO SEEN AT HIS RESIDENCE last evening, and when asked about the affair, said that he did not care to talk about it, as it was purely a personal matter between himself and Capt. Harris, and he did not believe in ventilating such matters in the newspapers. He said that he did not anticipate any further trouble, and was sorry that anything of the kind had occurred. He was at the police station in his official capacity, and he did not know what Capt. Harris had put himself in a position to give any attempt to intimidate an officer, as the statutes were especially severe in matters of this kind. He certainly should take no further notice of the matter unless it was forced upon him.

ANOTHER LITTLE ROW.

Yesterday afternoon a fight occurred between T. E. Rowan, Jr., and Maj. W. R. Burke, at the latter's office on Spring street, opposite the courthouse. The gentlemen had some words on the street about the payment of a bill, when Mr. Rowan went with Maj. Burke to see the receipt. Some words passed between them, in which the lie was given by Maj. Burke, when Mr. Rowan grabbed him by the throat and threw him against the partition. The Major, it is said, drew his pocket knife, but the parties were separated before any damage was done. There were no arrests.

"OLD BILL JUSTICE"

Dies of Lockjaw, Caused by a Hurt and Disposition.

William Justice, better known as "Old Bill Justice," for many years a well-known character about town, died at his residence at No. 108 Lazard street yesterday afternoon about 2 o'clock under rather peculiar circumstances. On the afternoon of the 14th inst., following the celebration by the French citizens of the fall of the Bastille, Justice was said to have had a fight with a man at the corner of Aliso and Vignes streets. At any rate, he had a wound on the side of his head, which had been caused either with a knife or some other instrument, and this was the way he accounted for it. Justice took no care of himself, not even washing the blood off, but continued in his usual way, drinking beer and getting drunk as often as the opportunity presented itself. In a few days he was taken sick, and went to bed. The story about the fight was brought up, and the police authorities began investigating it. Justice grew worse, and finally lockjaw set in, it was said. At any rate he died yesterday afternoon, at the same place, but before his death he

The Old Cucamonga Hotel Burned.

Death of Hubbs, the Victim of Young Bierce's Fury.

Singular Verdict of the Jury Investigating the Tragedy.

One of San Bernardino's Firebugs Makes a Full Confession of the Late Incendiarism—Notes.

By Telegram to The Times.
POMONA, July 27.—[By the Associated Press.] The Cucamonga Hotel, 18 miles east of Pomona, was burned to the ground yesterday evening. Nothing was saved. The hotel was about 38 years old and was the oldest in this region. It has been a resort for Mexicans for years, and years ago was a general meeting place for ranchmen of San Bernardino and Los Angeles counties.

THE CHICO TRAGEDY.

Young Hubbs Dead—His Ante-mortem Statement.

CHICO, July 27.—[By the Associated Press.] Cornelius Hubbs, the young man shot by Bierce yesterday, died at 5:30 this morning at the Central Hotel. The wound of Mrs. Hubbs is not dangerous. She remained with her husband until his death. A post-mortem examination of Bierce's body showed a wound in the groin, which would have proved fatal. It has been learned that Bierce made threats to kill the couple should they attempt to visit Mrs. Barney. The coroner's jury is now in session.

Hubbs made an ante-mortem statement to the District Attorney. He said when he visited Mrs. Barney's house with his wife yesterday he found Bierce there. Bierce abused them and tried to quarrel with them. He and his wife started to go, when Bierce, who a moment before had stepped into an adjoining room, reappeared and fired the shot striking Hubbs.

Hubbs returned the fire, and four shots were fired by each man. Hubbs told his wife to leave and went out of the door himself. When he found his wife not with him he returned, and hearing two more shots in the room broke open the door, and Bierce had locked it. He grappled with Bierce and threw him to the floor. Hubbs states that Mrs. Barney made no effort to stop Bierce shooting, but tried to get him to let Bierce up after the latter had been thrown to the floor.

Coroner Jay and a jury held an inquest on the body of Raymond B. Hubbs today. The jury visited the remains and returned a verdict that death resulted from a gunshot wound in the temple, inflicted by a person or persons unknown to the jury, there being doubt in the minds of the jury whether Bierce shot himself or not.

An inquest on Hubbs's body will be held on Monday. Mrs. Barney is still held under arrest, though not confined.

FIREBUGS.

Confession of One of the San Bernardino Gang.

SAN BERNARDINO, July 27.—[By the Associated Press.] James Tye, one of the parties arrested on Tuesday last, charged with setting fire to the Arizona saloon, at the depot, in January last, by which some 25 buildings were burned, made a confession this morning, stating that Tyler and Myers hired him to fire the building, and were to pay him $250 for the business, but they have never paid him yet. One week ago Tyler offered him $50 to set fire to the Calico saloon, which was burned on Tuesday last, but owing to an officer standing in front of the saloon early Tuesday morning he became frightened, and did not set the building on fire. Tyler and Myers went out to Robie Springs and stayed all night, in order to prove an alibi. When they came back in the morning and found that the building had not been burned, Tyler set it on fire himself, after cursing Tyler for cowardice.

The firebug who set fire to houses on First street Thursday night have not yet been apprehended, although the officers are on a hot trail, and their arrest is now only a matter of a few hours.

PAYING THE PIPER.

Members of a Tar-and-Feather Party Arrested.

FRESNO, July 27.—[By the Associated Press.] Constable Johnson and Deputy Fraser returned here today with D. and A. Brownstone, merchants, and Constable George Lowrey, all of Lemore. They are charged with having made an assault, July 15th, with deadly weapons, on Tony Tempeke, formerly clerk for the Brownstones. The latter, who had been paying attentions to a daughter of Dr. Brownstone, was accused of having been criminally intimate with the girl, and the Brownstones, in the presence of Constable Lowrey beat him to fire the building, taking him in a carriage several miles out of town, where he was covered with a coat of tar and feathers. Constable Lowrey, it is alleged, warning him at the point of a pistol not to resist. Defendants were released this afternoon in $1000 bonds.

DEVOURING FLAMES.

Large Fires Laging in the Vicinity of Santa Barbara.

SANTA BARBARA, July 27.—The fire which has been burning in the mountains has burned over the foothills and destroyed German & Egan's slaughter house and a large bridge built last year, also another house.

The temperature has been 100° here today.

At 12:15 a.m. parties arriving from Sumnerland report one store and two dwellings burned, and others in imminent danger. It is also reported that Mrs. Old and two children are missing. The fire is now raging from Kincon toward Carpenteria.

Fire Near Anaheim.

ANAHEIM, July 27.—Fire on the Clinda ranch, north of Anaheim, last evening swept over a vast amount of territory, destroying Charles Binder's bee ranch, windmill, barn and other property. The fire started from brush burning, which got beyond control. The loss is several thousand dollars.

A Bigamist Arrested.

STOCKTON, July 27.—Edward Pepper, known here as Frank Miller, who married a girl named M. Aguirre at Salinas recently, while he had a wife in the East, was arrested here this afternoon on a charge of bigamy, by friends of the second wife. Pepper acknowledges both marriages.

Big Trust Deed Filed.

VISALIA, July 27.—There was filed today in the County Recorder's office, dated April 1, 1889, a trust deed of the Central Pacific Railroad to the Metropolitan Trust Company of New York, on various lines in the State, for $10,000,000.

Railway Employees Discharged.

SACRAMENTO, July 27.—The Southern Pacific Company tonight discharged 350 of its employees because of the number being unionists. The officials say this action was taken to lessen the expenses of the road.

Hot at Pomona.

POMONA, July 27.—This has been the hottest day ever known in the Pomona valley. The highest temperature was at 2 p.m., when the mercury stood at 102° in the shade. At 6:30 p.m. it registered 92°.

BASE-BALL.

Chicago Takes Two Games From the Hoosiers.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 27.—[By the Associated Press.] Chicago and Indianapolis played two games today. In the first the local team was out-batted and out-fielded, and in fact out-played at all points. The second game was begun immediately at the conclusion of the first, and the home team lost because of errors by Hines, Glasscock and Bassett. First game:

Indianapolis.....1 0 0 0 0 3 0 1—5
Chicago.....1 0 4 1 1 3 1 3—17

Base hits: Indianapolis, 8; Chicago, 20; Errors: Indianapolis, 8; Chicago, 3. Batteries: Indianapolis, Brock and Dally; Chicago, Tener and Farrell. Umpire, Curry.

Second game:
Chicago.....0 0 0 0 0 0 5 0—5

Base hits: Indianapolis, 8; Chicago, 8. Errors: Indianapolis, 3; Chicago, 1. Batteries: Indianapolis, Boyle and Buckley; Chicago, Tener and Farrell. Umpire, Curry.

PITTSBURGH, July 27.—Pittsburgh finished the series with Cleveland, today, and made it three straight.
Pittsburgh.....3 3 0 0 4 0 0 2—11
Cleveland.....1 3 3 0 0 0 0 0—5

Base hits: Pittsburgh, 12; Cleveland, 10. Errors: Pittsburgh, 2; Cleveland, 4. Batteries: Pittsburgh, Galvin and Miller; Cleveland, Bakely, Zimmer and O'Brien. Umpire, McQuaid.

PHILADELPHIA, July 27.—The Phillies beat the Boston in a plucky, uphill fight today. Casey started in to pitch for the home club, but he was batted out of the box in the first inning. Wright then put Gleason in and the change worked like a charm.

Philadelphia.....3 0 0 0 1 2 0 0—5

Base hits: Philadelphia, 12; Boston, 11. Errors: Philadelphia, 3; Boston, 1. Batteries: Philadelphia, Gleason and Casey; Boston, Shriver, Boston, Clarkson and Bennett. Umpire, Powers.

BROOKLYN, July 27.—Brooklyn, 6; Cincinnati, 2.
COLUMBUS, July 27.—Columbus, 2; Louisville, 6.

BALTIMORE, July 27.—First game: Baltimore, 4; St. Louis, 2. Second game: Baltimore, 1; St. Louis, 3.

PHILADELPHIA, July 27.—Athletics, 12; Kansas City, 10.

NEW YORK, July 27.—The Washington-New York game was postponed on account of rain.

STOCKTON, July 27.—The champions gave another drubbing to the San Franciscos this afternoon in a game in which there was considerable ragged playing on both sides. Score: Stockton, 14; San Francisco, 7.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 27.—The Oakland played a good game today both at the bat and in the field. They made 16 hits off Ziegler, including a home-run and four doubles. Farrell was in the box for Oakland, and Sacramento only made seven scattered hits.

ANAHEIM Irrigation Matters.

ANAHEIM, July 27.—The Anaheim Union Water Company at a meeting this afternoon fixed the price of stock to be sold to the Wright irrigation district at $15 per share. There are 6000 shares which, at this price, would bring $90,000. The district of the old company is $48,500. The company decided to make the price which the Wright district have to pay, $160,000. Other meetings will be held to complete the details.

Suing His Creditors.

CHICAGO, July 27.—As a sequel to the suit of the Chicago creditors of Jacob Landsman of Helena, who the other day garnished the account of a Helena bank in the First National Bank of this city, Mr. Landsman through his attorneys today began suit against various credit and debtors, asking $25,000 damages for their alleged injurious acts which precipitated the insolvency on plaintiff.

Passenger Train Wrecked.

MEMPHIS (Tenn.), July 27.—A passenger train on the Chesapeake, Ohio and Southwestern Railroad was wrecked this morning at Brighton, four miles north of Memphis. Joseph J. Somerville, mail agent, was killed, and the baggage agent, and other passengers were badly hurt, and a number of passengers slightly shaken up.

The West Virginia Floods.

PARKERSBURG (W. Va.), July 27.—Further details of the disastrous flood in Wirt county show that a number of lives were lost. A circus performance was going on, when the cloudburst tore the canvas and paraphernalia to atoms, carrying off horses and wagons. Miss Anna, a trapeze performer, was drowned.

Lost in Alaska.

WINNIPEG, July 27.—Consul Taylor writes from Sitka, Alaska: "It is believed that a young man named Bruce of Nebraska, a correspondent, was lost near Mul Glacier, Glacier Bay, Alaska. It is believed that he fell down the crevasse. His companion is here to get Indians to help search for him."

Burned to Death.

GALT, July 27.—Mrs. Arthur Ralphs, near Clay Station, this county, undertook to kindle a fire yesterday with coal oil, when the can exploded, completely enveloping her body with the burning fluid. She died three hours later.

Ex-Senator Creighton's Sentence.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 27.—Ex-Senator R. J. Creighton, the convicted jury-briber, who returned here recently and surrendered to the police, was sentenced today to five years' imprisonment at San Quentin.

State Bar Association.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 27.—The State Bar Association was organized today by the adoption of a constitution and bylaws. The election of officers will be held September 14th.

The Coal Oil Can Again.

SEATTLE (Wash.), July 27.—Mrs. Julia Calder, 33 years old, was fatally burned this afternoon by an explosion of a gallon can of coal oil with which she was kindling a fire.

Body Recovered.

SAN DIEGO, July 27.—The body of Albert Osborne, drowned last Sunday at Ocean Beach, was found today at Pacific Beach, three and a half miles from the scene of the accident.

A Boy Held for Murder.

OAKLAND, July 27.—John Cully, aged 14, who shot and killed Albert Wagner at San Leandro on the 17th of July, was examined and held to answer without bail for murder today.

The Thermometer.

Yesterday was a pretty hot day all along the line. In this city the thermometer ran up to 95°; in Pasadena, 105°; San Bernardino, 106°; Riverside, 110°; Barstow, 117°; and at various points on the desert, between here and Yuma, it ran up to 120°. At Santa Monica and Coronado Beach it was only 74°.

Locked Up.

Between 11 and 12 o'clock last night a big Chinaman named Ah Gut was arrested at the corner of Aliso and Alameda streets by Officer Johnson for carrying concealed weapons. Gut had a 45-caliber revolver as long as his arm under his blouse.

By Telegram to The Times.

CHICAGO, July 27.—[By the Associated Press.] One of the heaviest rainfalls ever known in this section of the country, with thousands of dollars of damage in the city tonight. The storm cloud came from the northwest and meeting counter current of air, hovered over the city for two hours and a half, finally passing to the northeast. Rain began about 6:30, and continued in blinding sheets until 9 o'clock. The violence of the wind at times almost reached the fury of a tornado. In two hours and fifteen minutes there was the phenomenal rainfall of 4.12 inches.

THE CITY FLOODED.

Basements and cellars were flooded all over the city, some to a depth of three or four feet. The water rushed down the incline into the La Salle-street tunnel until it reached a depth of over three feet in the center, completely interrupting for a time traffic on the cable car.

On the West Side during the storm a tree was blown down upon a passing street car, crushing the roof and shaking up the passengers, but injuring none seriously.

In the outskirts of the city several houses were struck by lightning, the occupants being badly shaken up and scared, but no known killed.

A TERRIBLE DISASTER.

It is just learned that during the height of the storm, an unfinished building in process of construction at the corner of Twenty-first and Leavitt streets was blown down, completely demolishing a frame cottage that stood beside it. Eight persons were killed outright and three badly wounded. The killed are:

Mrs. Anna Buck, 69 years old.
Annie Buck, 8 years old.
Albert Buck, 6 years old.
Cornelius Fernandez, a blacksmith, 28 years old.

Mrs. Anna Fernandez, his wife, 31 years old, and Cora, Allida and Les, their children, aged respectively 5, 3 and 1 years.

The wounded are: Charles Buck, husband of Mrs. Anna Buck, Lulu Fernandez and Ada Fernandez.

During the storm tonight the large packing-house of George H. Hammond & Co., at Hammond, Ind., 3 miles distant, was struck by lightning and is now reported to have been totally destroyed by the consequent fire, together with several adjoining buildings. No details are obtainable. No casualties are reported.

"I AM INNOCENT."

A Convicted Prisoner Attempts Suicide in a Courtroom.

CHICAGO, July 27.—[By the Associated Press.] There was a sensational scene in Judge McConnell's courtroom at midnight. James W. Smith had been on trial for a few days past on a charge of criminally assaulting an 8-year-old girl, who had been taken by Smith and his wife from an orphan asylum at Akron, O., for adoption. The case was given to the jury this afternoon, and at 11:45 tonight they returned a verdict, finding Smith guilty and fixing his sentence at nine years in the penitentiary.

Smith was greatly affected, and rising to his feet exclaimed: "I am innocent! I swear before my God, whom I am about to meet, I am innocent!" As he finished he raised his hand, and with a small pocket-knife stabbed himself in the left breast. He fell backwards on the floor, while his wife, who had been sitting beside him, screamed wildly: "Oh, Jim, why did you do that?"

Doctors were hastily summoned, and found the wound an inch and a half deep, about three inches above the left nipple. They do not think the wound will be fatal.

In his pockets was found a letter addressed to Judge McConnell, but the judge was too much excited to read it tonight. Smith has always heretofore borne a good reputation, and was employed as a draftsman in the railroad office here.

WALKING ON WATER.

Remarkable Performance of a Boston Man.

BOSTON, July 27.—[By the Associated Press.] C. W. Oldrieve of Chelsea, who has appliances enabling him to walk on water, this afternoon walked on water five and a half miles. This cheered him to attempt a tramp of 20 miles to Boston. The last heard from him he was walking the waves towards this city, carrying a lighted lantern.

An Anti-Mormon Crusade.

NASHVILLE, July 27.—Two hundred people in Wilson county have banded together to drive out a Mormon elder and his converts. This is the result of a squabble in a church, in which Mormons interrupted Rev. John Barrett, a Baptist, and became so abusive that the congregation drove them from the church.

Will Not Sell Their Land.

TALIEQUAH (I.T.), July 27.—Chief Mays says it is no use for the United States Commission to come here to treat with them for the sale of their lands, as they will not sell. In the first place they don't want to sell; in the second their constitution forbids it.

JEWELFISH LAND.

SALT SEA FOAM FROM THE SHORES OF CATALINA.

Society at Avalon—The Metropole crowded for the Ball—Jewfish Twins—Supposed Wreck of the Sea Lion—Equestrianism.

AVALON (Santa Catalina), July 27.—[Correspondence of THE TIMES.] Capt. Remington is the courteous skipper of the steam launch Wanda, the trim little steam yacht that takes people to Seal Rock and up to the fishing banks, and always brings home a catch of some kind.

The Captain has been preparing to break the record of Jewfish for some time, and yesterday he did it. He had this to beat: Seymour E. Locke, Pasadena, a 300-pound Jewfish; Frank W. King of Hawley, King & Co., Los Angeles, a 200-pound Jewfish; Messrs. Walcott, Campbell, Johnston of San Rafael ranch, Garvanza, a 75-pound fish; Mr. Phillips of Pasadena, a 300-pound fish; Mr. Bell and Mr. Watson, two Jewfish running up to 300 pounds.

Capt. Remington took a party out from the Metropole yesterday with him in his eye, and just at dinner time, when the hotel piazza was crowded with people, the little yacht came around the rocks, whistling at the top of her bent, her crew cheering, and the vessel going at top speed. The report was started that she had broken down; but when two protuberances were seen on each side, and a moment later it was known that the objects were Jewfish. The Captain had taken two beauties, and their size and bulk could be imagined when it is known that they seriously impeded the speed of the little steamer, their big mouths catching a vast amount of water.

They were evidently twins, as they weighed 282 and 283 pounds, or 565 pounds in all. Thus the record is broken, and Catalina holds the cup. One of the fish, Capt. Remington took as far as from the Hotel Metropole to Sugar Loaf before he could even stop it. The big fish were cut up on the beach after they were photographed, and attracted about every man, woman and child on the island.

Mr. M. M. Parker, Mayor of Pasadena, Col. Ayers, editor of the Herald, Judge Van Doren, City Attorney Polley, Dr. Macomber and other distinguished lights gathered at the post mortem. The Jewfish so far caught are, according to the fisherman of the hotel, small ones. He has seen them down the Mexican coast eight feet long, and weighing 700 pounds. Your correspondent will take one of this size next week.

Mr. Charles D. McCandless of Pasadena, the photographic editor of the Jewfish, the photographer of the Jewfish, has a fine photograph of the Phillips 300-pound Jewfish in the hall of the Metropole. By the side of the huge fish stands a little 3-year-old girl, the daughter of Mr. King of Hawley, King & Co., which shows plainly its enormous dimensions.

Friday night a large crowd came down on the steamer, and during the evening the Metropole band played in front of the hotel, giving the second of the series of open-air concerts. The town is alive with summer visitors, and seems to be taking on the air of a place of fashion. In fact, large numbers of Los Angeles society people seem to be making the hotel their headquarters this year. The yachts of course aid in this. The Aggie is here with a gay party, composed of E. D. Silent, Miss Rising, James Slauson and others; Miss Adele Stoneman joined them here. They are at the Metropole most of the time.

The 20 or 30 editors of the Jewfish are not to be found tonight, the San Clemente composers struck at the last moment, it being believed that Col. Tom Gallagher, editor of the San Clemente Sea Serpent, bought them off; so the Jewfish had to be taken to Los Angeles by Mr. Kennedy, late of the Social World, to be printed, and it will appear with the poems, which were bought at great expense from the poet laureate of Catalina, will probably appear up side down; hence the editors have all gone fishing until the week is over.

A party has just returned from San Clemente, having made the trip in the Ruby. They made a three-days' stay on the island, and Mr. Harry Polley brought back a fine mortar and a number of Indian curiosities, some bones and parts of skulls. The systematic series of diggings there would undoubtedly well repay the archeologist.

The Union League is in camp at the other end of the island. There is water, water everywhere, but not a drop to drink. The club proposes to shoot itself and annihilate the Catalina Republicans; and the special artist of THE TIMES and its war correspondent are on the grounds. Mr. Bulla, the well-known Los Angeles lawyer, came over today, also District Attorney Kelly, while the tall form of Marshal Risley loomed up on the dock, and he found a welcome from many friends. Mr. McCandless of the natorium is here looking much better, and the gallant editor of the Herald, who is enjoying the fishing and bathing.

The yacht Sea Lion went ashore on Seal Rock yesterday and it is reported that she has gone to pieces, though the report is not yet confirmed. The crack yacht San Diego, Capt. Hayward, took a large party from the Metropole today and sailed about the island. It will take about three days, including a possible stop at the Union League camp above here.

People are surprised to find that they can sit on the piazza of the hotel until bedtime without experiencing the slightest chill while boating on the quiet bay is kept up until a late hour.

The ball Saturday evening was a great success. Over 400 guests crowded the ballroom. The social lights of Los Angeles were numerous that space does not permit the enumeration. Prominent were Miss Adele Stoneman, daughter of Gov. Stoneman, Miss Daisy Sumner, Mrs. E. D. Silent, Miss Rising, Miss Root, Mrs. C. A. Sumner, Miss Polley, Miss Glassell, Mrs. King, Miss Dorsey, Mrs. Reynolds, Miss Barrett, Miss Quinn, Miss Patton, Miss Smith, Miss Perry and many more from every State in the Union. The ball was voted a great success, and will be followed by a calico ball next Saturday evening. The enterprise and courtesy of Mr. Sumner has resulted in already making the hotel one of the most popular on the coast. The only trouble is, the hotel should be about five times as large to accommodate his many guests. A gay party went out riding over the trails today towards the west coast, under the leadership of Miss Daisy Sumner, who is one of the finest riders in Los Angeles.

Speaking of dogs, Dr. F. F. Rowland has presented the Valley Hunt Club of Pasadena a pack of fox hounds, valued at $300, which will afford no little sport next winter.

Mr. Roehrig, Pasadena's artistic architect, is over here. Yesterday he bagged an eagle and four goats, the former making a big fight before it gave in.

The late arrivals up to Saturday are as follows: Miss J. R. Dorsey, E. W. Hoyle, B. H. Howell and son, H. T. Payne, M. Reynolds, W. D. Buckner, N. M. Enkler, N. M. Kirchner, J. S. Shoeman, J. Bradish, M. D. Johnson, J. F. Holbrook, Mrs. Hervey Lindley and family, Dick Dwyer, C. D. Baker, Dr. Macomber, Miss Howell, F. H. Longley and wife, R. N. Bulla and daughter, J. Jewett and wife, E. D. Silent and wife, Miss Rising, James Slauson, Miss Root, Miss J. Davis, Miss Lillian Bowers, Miss Mary Cook, M. H. Crotty, Frank P. Kelly, District Attorney, Mrs. F. P. Kelly, Miss Susie Reelfo, Ed. S. Wadde, J. F. Hickman, L. E. Chapman, Mr. F. Walker and son, James McGinnis, John F. Blake, Don Juan Warner of Warner's ranch and party, Ed. L. Merritt, William Barsky, J. Kuhrt, J. Lovell. Two boats arrived Saturday, bringing over 100 visitors to the island. Rev. Uzzell has returned from Los Angeles, with some large cash donations for the church, which will be dedicated in August. JEWFISH.

ARROWHEAD.

From the Mountain Springs Resort—The Region Round About.

ARROWHEAD HOT SPRINGS, July 27.—[Correspondence of THE TIMES.] The seaside and island resort correspondence of THE TIMES have been quite "numerous," and a highly interesting feature of the paper of late, but I see nothing from our famous mountain retreats and health-restoring sanitariums which abound in the foothills, cañons and mountains of Southern California. I may be excused, therefore, for a feeble attempt to supply "a long-felt want" and tell the Times readers something of this place. These springs, as most of your readers know, issue from the south side of the San Bernardino range of mountains, on a picturesque plateau between Cold Water and Waterman cañons, about 2000 feet above the sea, and 1000 feet above and overlooking the beautiful and fertile valley of San Bernardino. It is probably the best-known and justly-famous resort of its kind in this part of the State. The plan of the company owning the hotel and mineral springs is to keep the place open the whole year round. It is the temporary abiding place of several Southern California people, as well as a smart sprinkle from other points in the United States. It unites the features of a resort and sanitarium. The climate is just too lovely for anything. It is now several degrees cooler than the valley below, and seldom causes any complaint on the score of heat from even the most fastidious faultfinder. The days are bright and clear nearly all the year, and in summer a brisk and refreshing breeze is blowing almost continuously. The region about abounds in grand scenery, babbling brooks and beautiful cascades. The hotel is admirably conducted, sparkling mountain water is abundant, the view always charming, and the retired character of the springs makes it one of the most "restful" places it has ever been my good fortune to visit. Here the overtaxed or overworked business or professional man is sure of a genuine rest, free from the distracting or disturbing features so common to the seaside. He will find here the most refined taste could suggest, and at a small and most reasonable outlay of wealth. The "amusements" here are neither numerous nor exciting, and still the place is not without "attractions." The athlete can find much to interest him on the mountains and along the deep and shaded ravines of the cañons. It is a highly absorbing locality for the botanist and mineralogist. Referring to the subject of botany, I am reminded of the wonderful progress that has been made here in the department of growing shade and ornamental trees. A few years ago there was little or nothing in the way of shrubbery near the hotel building, while at the present time the place begins to have the appearance of an evergreen wilderness. The growth in evergreens, deciduous fruit and ornamental trees has been the most rapid and remarkable I have ever observed. This has been the result of the unsparring use of water and the frostless feature of the winters here. These things have given opportunity of an almost constant growth, and the result is extremely interesting as showing what may be accomplished in the "warm belt" regions of Southern California in so short a time.

In addition to the general features of an outing here there is grand, good sport for the nimrod and angler. This is the season for deer-shooting and the sturdy hunter, who "quies" the layout," is generally pretty sure of getting meat after the first night out. We have no 300-pound Jewfish, but we have the little but sprightly mountain trout in great abundance in several of the brooks of the upper range. But our most favorite and common source of diversion is burro-riding up the trail and into the pines beyond the water-shed. Some make it in half a day, but the most satisfactory results obtained when the party leaves the hotel early in the morning, provided with lunch and spends the day out. When you have reached the highest point available, you have several thousand feet above the sea and about 3000 feet above the valley a landscape that has few equals for beauty and grandeur anywhere. Notwithstanding the excluded and retired character of the place we are in ready and easy communication with the outside world. I have more than once transmitted items of interest right from the hotel office to the editorial rooms of THE TIMES. This I did by telephone. We have a daily mail and stage twice a day from San Bernardino city, some seven miles below. Considerable of the "rivers" here are supplied by the ranch or place itself, including fowl, pigs, vegetables and fruit.

This has been the most successful season in the history of the company's operations here. The fame of the place as a health resort is justly expanding. The tourist and sightseer also has the place on his "little list."

PERSONAL MENTION.

The Powell family of San Francisco, including Mrs. A. Powell and the Misses Flora, Blanche and Eva Powell, are here for a long stay. Thomas J. Neuner, of the firm of Neuner & Mills, book-binders, of Los Angeles, is recuperating here, and is making substantial gains in point of health and strength. Mrs. Ralph B. Denning and family of Los Angeles are guests of the hotel. Mrs. G. W. Prescott, wife of Master Mechanic Prescott of the California Southern and California Central railroads, is a sojourner at the hotel. Messrs. J. S. Van Doren of Los Angeles and D. M. Dorman of Santa Ana left here today.

I noticed Mr. J. Greenwald, a cigar dealer of Los Angeles, among the guests of the hotel.

PASADENA NEWS.

A HIGH TEMPERATURE THINS THE COUNCIL.

The Board of Trustees—Church Worship—Fire and Water—Local Mention—Election of Officers—Here and There—Personal Mention.

PASADENA, July 27.—[Correspondence of THE TIMES.] The city Board of Trustees with difficulty mustered a quorum this morning. At the hour of meeting only Councilmen McLean and Thompson were present. About an hour later Young came in and the board went into session, with Throop in the chair.

The matter of removing the old engine-house to the lot owned by the city was discussed and referred to the Fire and Water Committee.

The Committee on Streets and Alleys reported changes in the location of electric lights, and recommended that the light at the depot be removed to the corner of Raymond avenue and Chestnut street, and that on Broadway avenue, near Colorado street, be removed to Euclid and Colorado. The report was received and adopted. The committee deplored the absence of Chairman Townsend in their meetings.

The bill of W. T. Y. Schenck, amounting to $1020, for 850 feet of 24-inch Paragon cotton hose, was introduced and ordered placed in city bonds. Councilman McLean suggested that the Clerk go to Catalina Island and have City Recorder Van Doren take the oath of office. When put in the form of a motion it was carried. This course was done to expedite matters in the Justice's court.

It was decided to fix the hour of the next meeting at 8:30 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon.

A communication of the school trustees, asking for the appointment of C. M. Ryan and J. W. Colyer as special police officers without pay, was read and so ordered.

A communication from W. U. Masters, requesting the use of the sidewalks for the mail carriers in delivering their mail on bicycles, was read and referred. The prayer of the petitioner will be granted.

The bill of the Rapid Fire Alarm System, of the Company of Louisville, Ky., asking the Council to postpone the purchase of any system until their representative could be present, was read and referred to the Fire and Water Committee.

The bills of G. G. and G. Morris, $3.50, H. S. Sussenger $1.10, and Sals Carnahan of $9.75, were audited and found correct.

Additional bids for furnishing horse carts and wagons were opened and read. The bids were from E. B. Preston & Co. of Chicago, and were referred.

Chief Engineer Jones reported that he had mustered in eight new men during the week, and that the department responded as promptly as it could at the fire yesterday. On motion the fire department was notified to respond to any alarm sent to it from any source, and to have arrested any parties sending in a false alarm with malicious intent.

The petition of Chief Engineer Jones, asking for a salary of $60, was heard and referred.

Adjourned until Tuesday.

CHURCH WORSHIP.

Services will be held in the several churches as usual.

At the meeting of young men, E. F. Brown will preside.

At the Universalist Church, Rev. E. L. Conger will preach in the morning only.

At the First Presbyterian Church, Rev. William Ormiston preaches morning and evening.

At the Christian Church, F. D. Holman of Portland officiates.

LOCAL MENTION.

The water was turned in today into the pipes of the North Pasadena Land and Water Company. Over one mile of new pipe was recently laid.

Calvin L. Case, while fighting the fire at the First Presbyterian Church yesterday, received a cut on his forehead.

William Darrow, a member of the fire department, while engaged in practice drill, was hit on the head by a falling brick, but not severely hurt.

This is the hottest day of the year, the thermometer registering 106° in the shade at 1 o'clock. There was, however, considerable business transacted.

Indications point to a large efflux of people to the seashore tomorrow. Over 5000 went down this evening.

Frank Haskell returned this afternoon from an extended trip into Colorado. He says it rains without ceasing just at present in that country.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

Pasadena Lodge No. 173 of the Independent Order of Good Templars held an election of officers last evening.

The roster for the ensuing six months is as follows: Chief Templar, W. Byran; Vice Templar, Miss Myrtle Elson; Secretary, Ceres Rogers; Financial Secretary, W. Smith; Treasurer, Miss Anna White; Guard, Miss Hattie Riehy; Sentinel, Frank Heiss. The officers will be installed at the next meeting.

HERE AND THERE.

Arthur Hayes had a hand badly lacerated this morning while engaged at work on Hurlbut's well.

Councilmen Townsend and Parker are out of the city, rusticating at the seashore and enjoying a much-needed rest.

Pasadena don't want the Reform School, as she is "reformed" enough now.

Miss Myrtle Elson, the obliging and courteous clerk in the art store of Judah & Seaman, started for Long Beach this evening on a vacation of five weeks.

The gentleman who signs "F.W." in a communication in the Star this evening considered his statements so unimportant that he forgot to sign his own name.

PERSONAL.

Walter Van Nuy left this morning to spend Sunday at Long Beach.

L. C. Torrance went over to Catalina this evening to visit his family.

Horace White, a clerk in the First National Bank, is spending the Sabbath with friends at Long Beach.

Lieut. A. L. Downing of the U. S. Signal Corps was in town today from San Pedro.

Dr. Michener returned this morning from a few days' stay at the beach.

Mrs. Graham, an intimate friend of the McCandless family, left for the East this afternoon.

City Clerk Cambell has gone to Catalina on important business.

N. C. Carter of Santa Anita came into town today en route for a cooler spot at the beach.

SANTA MONICA.

The $75,000 Aquarium Proposition—The Polo Players.

SANTA MONICA, July 28.—[Correspondence of THE TIMES.] It was about seven weeks ago that Prof. C. F. Heller of Pasadena broached the idea of constructing a large aquarium in Southern California. The ground was carefully looked over and Santa Monica decided on as the best place for such a project. The proposition was laid before Senator Jones, Col. Baker and Abbot Kinney. As a result T. W. Paikes of Pasadena was instructed to draw up plans, and has projected them, and brought them down today. The plan calls for a $75,000 building, this amount being apportioned as follows: Machinery, $6000; general construction, $30,000; brickwork, cement, tiling, etc., $1,200; one inch plate-glass for tanks, $20,000; service pipe to tanks, $20,000; incidentals, etc., $18,400. The building is to be 300 feet long and 85 feet high and will contain an aquarium 600 feet; shark tank, 8x42 feet; seal pool, fernery, marine wall tanks, sea floor, plunge bath for bathers 30x50 feet; ladies' lavatory and shower bath, dressing-rooms, library study, dining-room, kitchen, balcony and outside stand. There will also be two outside buildings, one a structure for the U. S. Fish Commission and the other a U. S. weather bureau. The stock will be obtained here and by a system of exchange with aquariums in other countries. Everything is in readiness, and as soon as the site is located work will be commenced.

Messrs. Proctor, Carter, Edmunds and Woodhouse played a fine polo game yesterday afternoon at the grounds of the association here, with Messrs. Parker, Young, Bolton and Machell. It was a real contest in preparation for the big match that is to be played at Agricultural Park on August 2d.

Prof. Van Tasse announces that everything is in readiness for the balloon ascension tomorrow, and the flight will take place at 3 p.m. Special trains are to be run on both roads.

The temperature here today was only 74° in the shade on the Arcadia porch, and the many sitters from town enjoyed much relief.

The hop at the Arcadia tonight has drawn a big crowd to the hostelry.

The Jingles had excellent audiences at their performances last night and tonight.

J. W. Scott's pavilions at the north end of the Arcadia bathhouse are completed, and seats have been placed under the shelters.

Capt. Bolton, the well-known polo player, arrived at the Arcadia today in company with Mr. Chadwick.

D. M. True, of the Pennsylvania system, is going to take a tent on North Beach for the summer.

The Misses Frances and Nettie Gephart, Alice Grimes Gibbs and Nellie C. Gibbs were on the sands today.

Judge Fitzgerald and Col. E. E. Hewitt were among the throng today.

H. Bryson is among the latest arrivals at the Arcadia.

C. Bassolt, D. McCool, L. C. Gordon and wife, Mrs. G. H. Drakenfeld, Mrs. Dennis and son, F. Lunt, G. F. McEllan, D. H. Tolard and C. H. Scott are among the arrivals at the Arcadia today.

LETTERS TO THE TIMES.

The Rincon Ditch.

HISTORY OF THE DITCH AND THE LAY OF THE LAND DESCRIBED.

RANCHITO, July 27.—[To the Editor of THE TIMES.] Be kind enough to give the following history of the Rincon ditch to the public:

La Puente rancho, formerly owned by William Workman, now the property of E. J. Baldwin, is situated north of the Paso de Bartolo Viejo rancho, on the San Gabriel River. The latter is familiarly known as the Ranchito, and has been Don Pio Pico's favorite ranch and home for years. In 1898 Don Pio began selling off and subdividing this property. The writer of this article was the first to obtain a deed from Don Pio under the new plan. The deed contained a conveyance of water. The floods of 1898-99 caused the San Gabriel River to force through another channel, and thus New San Gabriel River was formed. Through both of the above-mentioned ranches the San Gabriel River runs; also Puente Creek, a tributary. San Gabriel River sinks below the cañon where it comes from the mountains, and is lost in the sands of the river bed for a distance of several miles, then comes to the surface on the Baldwin and Pico ranches, below which it again becomes an underground river. There are 12 irrigating ditches that take water from the river. The Rincon ditch is the extreme upper one, while the lowest, San Antonio, carries water as far as Nadeau vineyard. Before the water supply was made permanent and successful for Ranchito, C. L. Strong in 1871 secured from William Workman the privilege to take water from some springs on Mr. Workman's land, and convey it by ditch and flume across Puente Creek, to irrigate a wheat field of 150 acres. This was accomplished satisfactorily. When the water was carried by ditch and flume, which dam and ditch and flume have been maintained and used each year successfully and continuously. The Dunlap land shares with all the other Ranchito land the riparian rights to San Gabriel water, and by virtue of use, appropriators' rights have been established. The water can be carried by ditch or by flume, but the expense is higher [at a large expense.—Ed.] which would cover every acre of the Reform-school tract. The present plan of open ditches is too expensive and should be followed by a piping system, in which, of course, all owners of water rights, making the expense lighter to each. As in other ditch companies, when right of way to convey water is not permanently purchased, a small sum has been paid yearly (not without exception known) to Mr. Baldwin for right of way across the lower line of his ranch for a distance of one mile. The Rincon ditch carries over 300 inches of water and irrigates about 800 acres. More water could be taken if the ditch, flume or pipe were larger.

The controversy over the Reform School site is a matter I have nothing to say about, but the Rincon ditch interests me more than almost anyone else in the neighborhood, for it cost me more money. B. D.

THE CITY IN BRIEF.

There were but two or three unimportant arrests made by the police yesterday.

The Young Los Angeles nine defeated the Cyclones yesterday, by a score of 9 to 0.

There are undelivered telegrams at the Western Union office for William Swart, Mrs. William S. Lyon, Mrs. M. H. Judd.

The Little Diamond Base Ball Club beat the Eagles yesterday, on their San Pedro street grounds, near Seventh street, by a score of 20 to 9.

C. W. Holden yesterday swore out a complaint against George Abbott, charging him with obtaining money under false pretenses, and a warrant was issued for his arrest.

T. J. Cuddy has 17 days more to serve in the County Jail to complete his six months' term of imprisonment, to which he was sentenced by Judge Ross for contempt of the United States Court.

The first issue of the Pacific Poultry World, published in this city by C. M. Heintz, has just appeared. It is a bright-looking publication and full of interest to those who wish to inform themselves concerning the breeding and keeping of poultry, pigeons and pet stock.

John Daly and Pat Gwens, a couple of ancient "toughs," got into a fight at the corner of First and Main streets, yesterday afternoon, and when Officer Van Cleave started to arrest them, they broke and ran. They were caught after a lively chase and sent to the police station by Officer Vignes.

The Nationalist Club expect a very interesting meeting this afternoon, at Turnverein Hall. Frank Campbell, one of the Topolobampo colonists, will deliver an address; also Mr. Holloway, the editor of the Pacific Review, and the incoming president, Dr. Peebles, will give his inaugural address.

The Continental Building and Loan Association, recently incorporated, has elected the following officers: President, William B. Herriott; vice president, G. E. Wells; secretary, William N. Holway; superintendent of agencies, O. A. Lane; treasurer, Southern California National Bank; attorney, Judge J. W. Cochran.

A correspondent writes to THE TIMES to say that the Independent Order of Foresters is a fake. He says that the Ancient Order is O. K., but the Independent Order is simply made up of expelled members from the Ancient Order, and is not only an imposition upon the latter, but a swindle on the community.

Mrs. M. S. Seaver, who is a niece of Gen. Jackson, is very anxious to meet the old lady who escaped, with her three little grandchildren, from the Johnstown flood, and went to Burbank last Friday. Mrs. Seaver resides at No. 681 Sixth street, and will thankfully receive any information regarding her relatives at Burbank.

The pulpit of Trinity M. E. Church South, on Fort street, will be occupied today at 11 a. m. by Dr. W. G. Miller of Little Rock, Ark. He is a leading man in his church, and will no doubt entertain and profit his audience. He has recently been traveling through the Oriental countries, and will lecture in the same church on Wednesday evening, July 31st, on "Egypt."

THE EDGEOMB CASE.

Principals Seem to Take Little Interest in It.

The Edgecomb charges are degenerating into farces, and another turn in the box yesterday only strengthened the statement. The charge of attempting to procure an abortion on Miss Malla Garrett, now his wife, was continued Friday until yesterday morning, on account of the absence of Capt. Garrett. Yesterday morning the episode of the day before was repeated, and the case went over until August 1st. The only interested parties present were Mother Watson and Marion Brooks, counsel for Edgecomb. Mrs. Edgecomb, Capt. Garrett and all other witnesses did not put in an appearance. Afterwards Capt. Garrett came to Justice Lockwood and told him that the reason he was not present was because he knew nothing about the case, and did not suppose it would be necessary for him to be in attendance. He was served with a subpoena for his attendance August 1st. Mother Watson seemed very much surprised that Mrs. Edgecomb was not present, and wanted to know why it had happened, but no one could inform her. In the meantime Edgecomb is in jail, and his new-made wife is waiting outside for his release.

PERSONAL NEWS.

H. J. Hudson of South Riverside is at the Hollenbeck.

E. F. Russell and E. E. Russell of Chicago are registered at the Hollenbeck.

Mrs. M. M. Meyers and family, Tacoma, Wash., are in the city, stopping at the Hollenbeck.

L. B. Brandt, E. L. Kohlberg, J. Bamberg, Frank H. Swett, A. H. Has and E. L. Paddock of San Francisco are at the Hollenbeck.

The following passengers left for the north by Southern Pacific trains yesterday: George G. Carr, Mrs. Riggen, Ed Dunham, Mr. Shackelford, B. M. Thomas, T. E. Colton, E. Maynard and J. H. Vooler.

Mrs. V. B. Nellis leaves this morning for New York, via Panama, to accept an important and lucrative position in her profession in that city, in which she will remain some nine months, and then sail for Europe.

Frank M. Kelsey, of the firm of Bryan & Kelsey, notary public and conveyancer, 17 North Spring street.

Put your claims against others, or interests in property to be settled, in the hands of H. H. Heath, Bryson-Bonebrake block.

Card of Thanks.

I wish to publicly express my heartfelt gratitude to Capt. Hobbs et al. of the yacht Puritan for their timely services in rescuing my people from the wreck of the Sea Lion yesterday morning, off Seal Rock, and hope never to be called on to return the favor in the same manner. Also to Capt. Remington for the assistance of his steam launch.

PEOPLE'S STORE.

CEASELESS, TIRELESS, INDEFATIGABLE WORKERS.

Another Triumph for Tomorrow—Our 19c Sale Will Prove the Greatest of Bargain-givers.

PEOPLE'S STORE, LOS ANGELES, JULY 28, 1929.

Another Triumph Tomorrow.

We are ceaseless, tireless, indefatigable workers, constantly on the alert for something new and interesting—something to benefit your desires and a saving to a great degree. Our 19c sale that we place before you tomorrow is the greatest bargain-giver that it has ever been your lot to attend. The muttering of the crowds—three deep before our windows—"How can they do it?" and with a knowing wink, as much as to say "The bottom is dropping out." Prices are going to tumble. Most honored patrons do not believe because we are selling some goods below cost, a great many at cost, and a few a little above cost, there is going to be a tumble. Rest assured we are safe, and you are safe, and we are going to be with you many years dealing out sledge-hammer bargains, and hard hitters to the avowed enemies of low prices. We will explain in our next why we sell some goods below cost, a good many at cost and a few a little above cost, and by so doing adding you to buy your wares at prices that the general storekeeper has to pay for them, and at the same time yielding us a fair return for our investment.

GUATEMALA CITY.

SCENES IN THE CENTRAL AMERICAN CAPITAL.

The Population—Preponderance of the Indian Element—Buildings, Business and Bull-fights—Ex-President Barrios—Aqueducts, Peddlers and Priests.

[EIGHTH LETTER.]
GUATEMALA CITY, June 20.—[Special Correspondence of THE TIMES.] A most delightful day at La Libertad, a sweltering night at Acajutla, we rounded up our Pacific sea voyage at San José de Guatemala. This is the chief Pacific port of that country, but is without a harbor, and no steamer can approach within one mile of its surf-beaten shore. A long iron pier, like that of La Libertad, is built out far beyond the breakers, where passengers, freight and baggage are landed and subjected to the torments of customs officials. After an hour's siege with this latter class, we took the train of a narrow-gauge road for Guatemala City, a distance of seventy-five miles. The first forty miles of this journey is through a vast lowland, which borders the entire coast, and which is studded with a most prolific growth of every tree and shrub found in the tropics. After leaving the breakfast-station of Esquintla, about one hour, our little iron horse began the ascent of the mountains, threading a serpentine route among the hills, over gorges, through deep ravines, up hillsides, around towering precipices, until at an elevation of 5500 feet, we could look down upon the towns and villages we had just passed, which dotted the vale to the seashore. We also experienced a radical change in the temperature, from the severe heat of the seashore and plain, to one extremely agreeable and pleasant. At every station vast crowds of Indian fruit vendors gathered about the coaches, offering their varied products for sale. We were much surprised to find among these fruits, peaches, apples, pears, plums, which had been encountered nowhere else in Central America, and which are only common to temperate climates. But the high altitude we had reached, where the mountain tops stretched out into broad and fertile plateaus, explained the growth of the fruit. We also observed water melons, melons, and a profusion of other things. The vendors were all women, with a uniform dress, which consisted of a short waist of native cloth, which reached about 12 inches below the shoulder, leaving about 3 inches of the body bare between this and the skirt, which was simply about 3 yards of cotton cloth wrapped around the hips and secured by a red waistband. In this strange attire they really looked neat, but possessed ugly features and a kind of "sheepish" look, which we found to be the case with the majority of this class encountered in the Republic. Guatemala, about 15 miles from the capital, the road led around the beautiful lake of Amatitlan, which covers one of the ancient cities of this country. For three miles the railroad skirted along the shore of this charming lake, which is walled in upon every side by tall mountain ranges and lies within the ominous shadow of Volcan de Agua. The lake is of volcanic origin, and several of the springs around it are of boiling water. Recently the Government has undertaken the scientific exploration of this lake, being rewarded with the discovery that its basin was once the site of a great and ancient city. In proof of this, some of the finest ceramic specimens yet found in Central America have been fished from the ooze and mud of its bottom by Indian divers. Not less than pieces of pottery, implements, idols and other evidences of these ancient peoples are to be seen in the museum of Guatemala City.

At last the capital was reached, the greatest, perhaps, of all of the Spanish capitals of Central America, and rich in legends, traditions and romance. As I was to remain here for several days, the opportunity was inviting and the temptations great to hunt up and reburial some of the many fairy tales, which have come down from the Spanish conquest and woven into the history of this city. But I desisted, and pass over this oft-trodden field, over the achievements of Alvarado, the destructive earthquakes, the plagues and pestilences, and address myself to the Guatemala of today. It is a city of 60,000 people, with many magnificent dwellings and public buildings, street-car lines, gas and electric light, water works, ice factories, elegant streets, fine and costly churches, magnificent market places, fine schools and colleges, telegraph and telephone facilities, superb hotels and transportation facilities to neighboring towns, parks and botanical gardens, a grand theater, museums of antiquities and natural history, a costly amphitheater for athletic exercises (principally bull-fights), paved thoroughfares and immense trade emporiums. In fact, it is an ancient city thoroughly modernized. The wealth and intelligence of the country is centered here, and being the seat of the various foreign legations to Central America, it necessarily contains an excellent and select society. The climate is all that could be desired, being uniformly agreeable throughout the year and demanding the constant use of blankets at night. Being located 6000 feet above the sea level, it is very near the frost and ice line. But in spite of all of these advantages, it has allowed its aqueducts, built by the Spaniards and which supply the city with water, to be neglected, and in consequence the water is bad and promotive of many classes of fever and bowel troubles. The sewerage is also bad, emitting odors, at times, which are almost unbearable and aiding in the contamination of the water as a disease-producer. The bulk of the population are Indians and half-breeds, but the leading business men are foreigners—English, French, German and American. The natives are more or less clever and hospitable people, but there was less congeniality between the foreign residents than we had encountered anywhere else in the tropics. Whether this arises from commercial rivalry, racial or social prejudices or other causes, we could not determine.

In the days of the despotic tyrant, Rafael Carrera, who made himself perpetual dictator of Guatemala, there sprang up a hatred of foreigners, which it required a long time to dissipate. Carrera was a full-blooded Indian, and shared all of the suspicious and narrow prejudices of that race, which necessarily retarded the growth of the Republic and the development of this city, until the advent of his progressive successor, Rufino Barrios.

This latter ruler, while a half-breed himself, and possessing many of the brutal instincts of Carrera, was, nevertheless, a far-sighted statesman, who saw the value of intelligent immigration and encouraged it by every means within his power. It is to his long administration, interlarded with many stupendous undertakings, that Guatemala City owes its present advancement.

To the foreigner traveling in this country there is something almost ludicrous in the frequency of expressions of eulogy of the progressive spirit of the late President Barrios. This unassuming admiration for this particular quality of Barrios is not confined to the native Guatemalans, but enthusiastically shared by the sojourning foreigner. "When Barrios was here," is heard with almost as much frequency as the ordinary salutations of the day. Though this monotone of what Barrios had done, was being repeated by all, I have seen, and was surprised to find that the same expression was heard from the capital of the road led around the beautiful lake of Amatitlan, which covers one of the ancient cities of this country. For three miles the railroad skirted along the shore of this charming lake, which is walled in upon every side by tall mountain ranges and lies within the ominous shadow of Volcan de Agua. The lake is of volcanic origin, and several of the springs around it are of boiling water. Recently the Government has undertaken the scientific exploration of this lake, being rewarded with the discovery that its basin was once the site of a great and ancient city. In proof of this, some of the finest ceramic specimens yet found in Central America have been fished from the ooze and mud of its bottom by Indian divers. Not less than pieces of pottery, implements, idols and other evidences of these ancient peoples are to be seen in the museum of Guatemala City.

But it was not until after the death of Barrios that much of his brutality became known and the barred doors of the capital prison were thrown open and revealed their terrible secrets. State prisoners, pale and haggard, were turned out that had long since been considered dead. Their frightful tales of long suffering, scourges and privations were written in their wan, emaciated and trouble-seamed faces, while the barbarities and murders that had been enacted in their presence were recited in a harrowing tale. Tyranny in its most brutal form had reigned supreme; absolutism, more oppressive and barbarous than that of the autocrat of Russia, had enslaved the people; a secret inquisition, more inhuman in some of its butcheries than that which had decimated the early Protestants. All this and far more, which we have not the time to give in detail, rests at the door of Rufino Barrios—the pupil and successor of Carrera. But there is another side to the life of this man, who is reputed to have finally lost his life, by the traitorous bullet of one of his own soldiers at the battle of Chalchuapa. While it does not atone, in any measure, for his misdeeds, it is a redeeming trait in his otherwise hard character. This bright side is voiced in the sentiment, to which we have already referred, which points to an epoch "when Barrios was here," as being the one most prolific in public progress. Though the State lost millions by his peculations, he left a legacy of progress and a system of public improvements that must remain an enduring monument to his memory, leaving even the lingering regret for the time "when Barrios was here."

A ride out to Antigua, the ruined city, afforded us an opportunity to inspect the ruin wrought by the frightful earthquake of 150 years ago, when the capital was removed from here to its present site. While at Antigua, workmen engaged in excavating among the ruins, came upon a queer apartment in the supposed dwelling of Alvarado, who finally proved to be the kitchen of the great founder of the city. Curious seekers eagerly grabbed up pieces of crockery and cement to bear away to their different homes. We entertained no such admiration for the man who was guilty of so many inhumanities to the poor, defenseless Indians. A ride up one of the slopes of Agua, a brief rest at the charming village of San Rafael, and we were back again at the capital. We encountered upon the road, on our return, a vast number of those peculiar Indian peddlers so often observed in this country. They carry an immense pack of varied merchandise, which is strapped in and around a long piece of wicker work and suspended by a strap from the forehead down the back. In this way they can easily move about, for any distance, with 200 pounds. The women carried their burdens upon the head, with the almost invariable baby strapped on the back.

Guatemala City has been termed the Paris of Central America, and its advancement over other cities of the country would seem to authorize this designation. It is situated on a great plateau, overlooking a vast expanse of country. It was founded in 1775, after the destruction of Antigua, and many of its finest churches were commenced about that time. The beautiful cathedral, constructed by the Jesuits in the latter part of the last century, is a massive and imposing building, and considered throughout, may be regarded one of the finest buildings in the five republics. Cerro del Carmen, one of the oldest missions in Central America, is located about one mile from the city. The church, however, has been shorn of much of its former power, in all of these republics, and especially in Guatemala, where even the presence of a bishop is now displeasing to the Government. All monastic orders have been suppressed and a complete severance of church and state. This is a somewhat strange condition for a country once so intensely religious, that everything was blindly subservient to the church. In spite of this prestige and the indignities to which their church has been subjected, the Roman Catholic faith has held its sway over the masses and continued unceasingly the religion of the country. The present administration, under President Barrios, has been a little more lenient with the church party than his predecessor and from our observation, they are preparing to contest for supremacy in the next elections. We called upon the President, before leaving the city, and were received most cordially by that official. He seemed alive to all questions pertaining to the advancement of Guatemala, and while he may not possess the ability of his predecessor, he is, nevertheless, a progressive man, and doing all in his power to push forward public improvements. He spoke hopefully of the outcome of the congress of American nations, which is to be held in Washington in October next. He felt that it would bring the Spanish speaking people of Central and South America into closer social and commercial relations, as it would also be the means of inaugurating international arbitration, and make the disastrous wars, which so often occur, things of the past. He also referred to the subject of the recent expulsion from Guatemala of the editor of the Guatemala Star, John H. Hollander, who is a native of the United States. The President said that his controlling motive was his deep respect and esteem for the United States, whose accredited Minister, in connection with other prominent men of Guatemala, Hollander had slanderously criticized. Upon the day of our departure United States Minister Meiser had asked that Hollander be allowed to return, but the Government refused. Hollander is now in Washington endeavoring, through the State Department, to elude the international relations. From what we observed and heard he was in very bad odor, both with the Government and American residents here. A. J. MILLER.

THE CATALINA CHAMOIS
THE AGILE ANIMAL IN HIS ISLAND HABITAT.

Hunting the Wild Goat—Exciting Sport in Catalina Mountains—Long-Range Shooting a Fascinating Pastime.

AVAILON (Catalina), July 20.—[Special Correspondence of THE TIMES.] "If it is not a bona fide chamois it affords about as much sport, more to my fancy, and equally as much climbing." So said a gentleman who had followed the real thing in the Alps. "It's the biggest thing I have found in Southern California," he continued, "and is far ahead of your deer hunting, which entails too much crawling through brush and hard work. The only objection one can find to the Catalina sport is that the goats are the descendants of tame stock; but this does not interfere with the sport, as the animals are so wild that if you get a good buck you may be sure that he has earned it; and if the animals get to the windward of you it is the last you will see of them. In other words," said the enthusiast, "the goats are not too wild, but just wild enough."

Exactly when the goats were brought here no one seems to know; but they have been here so long that they have reverted to their natural condition and have increased so that they are found all over the interior mountains and cañons, and afford fine sport to the hunter who cares for climbing mountains on horseback and going over trails that almost require hooks to hold on. The goats have increased so in numbers that the Hotel Metropole now holds them for the guests, allowing the latter to shoot all they want for legitimate purposes, and it is the correct thing here to go goat hunting and carry home a big pair of horns as a trophy.

You are up before sunrise, watch the great globe coming up over the waters of the Pacific and the Sierra Madre range and look out of your window at the view from here, 20 or 30 miles to the west.

The view from here was grand. Great peaks and ridges everywhere; hawks flying off to nothing at all, on which goats and sheep were grazing, and far down in the great cañon an eagle was soaring round and round in ever-increasing circles to gain the upper world. Moving over to the west, I followed the mountains along, looking the horse over the slopes, until finally I stood on the very edge of the precipice. I judged the water to be a thousand or more yards below. Perhaps it was deceptive, as between me and it flecks of fog cloud were drifting in from the great banks off shore, giving it a weird and impressive appearance. I urged the faithful horse of Valquez to within a few feet of the edge, and leaning on the saddle looked down, catching the deep blue of the water occasionally through the mist, seeing the white foam of the breakers as they broke on the rocks, without hearing the roar.

The only sound that came up from this great depth was the occasional bark of a sea lion or the cry of some high flying gull. I found the spot so attractive that I stood there for a long time, realizing that I was perfectly alone and about as far west as I could get—old Tom Gallagher on San Clemente was the only man beyond me. On a clear day San Clemente can be plainly seen from here, 20 or 30 miles to the west.

Later the remainder of the party came up, with another buck and many stories of the wonderful mine and the cañon that leads to the ocean. One of the legends of Silver Cañon is of city youth, who, with a repleat outfit, came to Catalina. He was stationed on a hogback, and so the story goes, a big and vicious buck came tearing over the divide, and unconsciously rammed the mighty hunter down the slope—sans gun, sans hat, sans everything. Thus equipped we are off, Mexican Joe bequiling the time up the attractive cañon by stories of the old times. The cañon at the hotel is perhaps half a mile wide, and winds away westward, rising gradually, and becoming well wooded, until finally, a mile or so up, Joe suddenly turns to the right, and goes up the face of what appears an almost inaccessible cliff. The narrow paths winds away, and ever and anon we stop and give the faithful horse a breathing spell. Now we are a thousand feet above Avalon, and turn to see an ideal view: The little bay of Avalon is below us, the steel blue of the waters sharply outlined by the rocky shores. The tents are white dots—they might be gulls—on the shore, and the sails of yachts as they move across the bay are perhaps other sea birds. In other directions a maze of rugged mountains stretch away. Up we go, the horses following the indistinct trail, along hog-backs, over huge ridges, ever upward. You are entirely taken up with the wonderful features of the curious island, have forgotten all about wild goats when suddenly Joe gives a whistle and points over the cañon. You see nothing. Then comes on the wind, borne over from the west side, a faint sound, the "baa" of the wild goat. You look up the slope, even the horse of Valquez cannot climb that, and you slide off and try the slippery hill. The trails of innumerable sheep aid you, and crouching, slipping and sliding, you creep on and finally gain a big rock, crawl around the edge and look over. One, two, three, fifty goats. There they stand, a thousand yards away, on the other side of the deep cañon, you can see the white and black ones plainly when they move—and not far away is a flock of sheep.

A big buck, you can see his horns in relief, even, so far away, stands out from the rest, and you pick him out, brace back against the friendly bowler, and let him have it. He jumps, staggers, leaps into the air, and goes rolling down the abyss. Crack! crack! you raise the dust in front of the next, and the repeaters of your friends are cracking about your ears, while the goats are making a mad rush over the divide.

Two have dropped, and you turn to receive the congratulations of your friend to find that he claims the shot. It is always thus; but you are magnanimous and allow him to go down into the cañon and pack it up.

The sides of Catalina cañons are as slippery as glass, and to pack up a goat is no joke; yet a man can perform wonders under the guise of hunting that would be simply impossible under the name of simple work.

The goat's head, if it is a fine one, is removed and dropped into the gunny-bag taken for the purpose, the horses mounted again and the march taken up.

You are now on the very summit of one of the big peaks. To the right is the trail leading down into Silver Cañon, to the mine, and so on to the ocean on the windward side of the island.

Those who wanted more game took this trail and wound down into the beautiful cañon, that some day will be reached by a fine road from the Metropole; now the trail is a difficult one for horses, and would astonish the eastern rider, but yet is perfectly safe in every way. In the cañon goats are nearly always found, and I soon heard the local rises coming out of the deep abyss, and the shouts telling of more game.

I preferred to follow the cañon around in the mountains, and was well repaid by the grandeur of the scene. I venture to say that when a good road is built this will be one of the best places to visit.

The view from here was grand. Great peaks and ridges everywhere; hawks flying off to nothing at all, on which goats and sheep were grazing, and far down in the great cañon an eagle was soaring round and round in ever-increasing circles to gain the upper world.

A FASHIONABLE FAD.

PRIZE-FIGHTING IN PARLORS OF THE BON TON.

Greatly Stimulated by the Late Sullivan-Kilrain Mill, but the Gilded Youth Are Not Themselves the Fighters—Bohemian Life in the Metropolis.

NEW YORK, July 18.—[Correspondence of THE TIMES.] The Sullivan-Kilrain fight has increased the virulence of a fad long cultivated by the gilded youth of New York.

To a large number of men with more money than brains, nothing is more enjoyable than a private prize-fight in their own parlors. They do not fight themselves, being physically better adapted to adorn a doctor's skeleton closet than a 24-foot ring, but depend upon a small legion of pugs and toughs who frequent the sporting saloons of the metropolis.

These modern gladiators charge their employers from $5 to $50 a piece, according to their pugilistic skill, and as to whether they are called upon to fight four rounds, eight rounds or to a finish with soft gloves, or what they humorously call "pillows."

Billy Edwards, the famous lightweight champion, who is now the bouncer of the Hoffman House art gallery, and "Warry" Edwards, his not less famous brother, formerly had an almost complete monopoly of supplying these fighters, but now nearly all the proprietors of the sporting houses around Sixth avenue and Thirtieth street indulge more or less in the same business.

It is a sad confession to make, but a number of women, who seem to be ruled by folly in all they do, are beginning to show the same fever to pugilism that they have long done to actors. Any afternoon on the "Upper Midway," which is that part of Broadway among the masses, during many pugilists making acquaintances and receiving the same attention from flirtatious young women as do the Theatopian promenade. While walking that route the other evening with a well-informed New York clubman, I had pointed out to me in quick succession Joe Coburn, Mike Donovan, "Warry" Edwards, Tim Murphy, Joe Leonard, George Macarthy and someone called "The Mouse." To my surprise, they were as well-dressed, and certainly as well-behaved, as the crowd of bad actors who make that part of Broadway unendurable to women unaccompanied by escorts.

Out-of-town people can have no idea of the magnitude and variety of Bohemian life in New York. It rivals, if it does not surpass, the life of Paris, and contains more talent and genius than its competitors in the French capital. It is divided into groups of men and women, running from 10 to 100 in number. There are more than 100 of these groups, each one of which clusters around one or two men. A notable crowd is that of which the nominal head is Henry Guy Carleton, the humorist and playwright. It contains beside him Bill Nye, the imitator; Chaudes Fulton, the writer; B. B. Valentine, the willow editor of Puck, and Alice Fisher, the actress. Their chief headquarters are the handsome apartments occupied by Carleton in Washington Square.

A good story is told in connection with a dinner lately given by Carleton. The feature of the entertainment was a large pom-pom which had been brought by rail from New Orleans. By some mischance the ice had given out upon the journey and the condition of the fish when served may be better imagined than described. The company tasted the delicacy but said nothing. Carleton, who had not partaken of it as yet, asked Nye, "How do you think, Bill, that fish was brought here?" intending, probably, to give a brief dissertation upon the usefulness of refrigeration cars. Nye looked around quizzically upon the assembled company and answered with deliberation: "I don't think, I know; it was brought here on a hearse!"

Henry Guy Carleton is a handsome, dark-eyed man, an amusing companion and a generous friend. He has a great amount of personal magnetism and is the center around which revolve many satellites.

Bill Nye is just as funny in real life as he is in print, and he has sketched himself so admirably that there is nothing left for the chronicler to do.

It suffices to say that the long, loose-jointed frame and bald head, shining like a beautifully polished billiard ball, are in no wise exaggerations, and the portraits which accompany many of his articles are as true to life as if shadowed upon the camera. The humorist, whose wit flows as freely as water running through a sieve, is a prime favorite with newspaper men and is pronounced a jolly good fellow wherever he goes.

Another prominent group is the Fales-Barrymore set, which meets nightly in the little French restaurant of the West Side.

W. E. Fales is a man of intense personality, independence and intellectuality. He is tall and stout, though well proportioned, has light hair and a blonde mustache, and is the very incarnation of jollity and good humor. He is, furthermore, a man of infinite tact, endowed with remarkable perceptive powers, and is well fitted to be the nucleus around which clusters the brilliant lights of the journalistic, literary and theatrical worlds.

Maurice Barrymore, as everyone knows, is the adored of all woman-kind, and is quite as popular before as behind the footlights. He is not alone handsome and fascinating, but is a highly educated man, gifted with a ceaseless flow of wit and anecdote. Mr. Barrymore is equally at home in Belgium as in Bohemia, a man of no small talent, and one cannot fail to admire the versatility and adaptability of the great actor.

Besides its two heads, this group contains Hugh Farrar McDermott, an old Californian, a sweet poet and a clever journalist; Delancy Pearson, the novelist; Henry Clay Lukens; John Ernest McCann, a very brilliant versifier; Heron Allen, the palmitist and novelist; John Moran, the poet; J. Army Knox, the eccentric editor of Texas Siftings; Walsh of the Herald, and a number of artists, all well-known like George R. Halm, John Durken, Walter Pelham, Frederick Barnard, Count Miranda, John Staples Rowe, Arthur Meyer, Will Hooper, and a crowd of actresses and singers, among whom are Katherine Howe, Leonora Bradley, Esther Delano, Grace Henderson, Mabel Morris, Daisy Temple, Grace Addison, Maude Grainger, Maude Wentworth and Ray Douglas. Nearly all of these women possess great beauty and more or less intellectual ability. Besides the men named, and equal worthy of mention, are Frank Mayo, the actor; David A. Curtis, the writer; Grosvenor Wilson the playwright; Col. Frank Burr, the correspondent; George Edgar, the tragedian; Daniel Bandmann, the actor; Louis Megre, the actor; Harry of the Herald; James L. Hand of the Star, and Eugene Levy of the Forum.

Of the two leaders of this set, Fales represents the conservative and Barrymore the radical element. The only difference I can discern between the two is that the former goes to bed in the early morning, and the latter doesn't go to bed at all. To an outsider, like myself, their mode of living is a mystery and a miracle. They meet in a restaurant about 6 o'clock in the evening and dine together, and at 7:30 they separate, the actors and singers going to the theaters where they are employed, and the newspaper men to their various tasks, while the remainder sit over their wine and cigarettes discussing the new books, the latest plays, and all sorts of curious literary and professional gossip. At 11 they usually come together again for an hour in some resort where beer and music are obtainable in large quantities. After midnight they commence to make calls upon each other, over twenty of them get together in one house from that hour until morning. How they manage to keep it up and attend to their regular work is something that I cannot understand. They do it however, and are as bright and fresh today as they were a year ago, but when they do go to bed they go quickly.

In the past three years the Fales-Barrymore set have lost at least a dozen of their brightest lights. Among these were Selma Delano, famous as actress, beauty and novelist; Mary Fiske, better known to the reading public as "The Gladys Gusher"; James A. Wales, the great artist of Puck; Frank Saltus, less known, but a greater genius than his brother, Edgar, the novelist; and J. C. Goldsmith, better known as J. Charlton.

The little French restaurants of the West Side are an institution peculiar to New York. They are found around Broadway and Sixth avenue and between Twenty-third street and Fortieth street. They are run chiefly by Alsatians or Swiss, and are exquisitely clean and neat. Their charges are extremely reasonable, an average dinner, which costs 50 cents, consisting of olives and radishes, soup, fish, entrees, vegetables, roast, salad, dessert, cheese, coffee, and a small bottle of California white or red wine. All of them serve fine cigars in diminutive glasses, for which the charge is 10 cents apiece.

The more popular ones are rechristened by their Bohemian patrons, and become known by outlandish names. Jacqueminette, for example, the largest of all, and a restaurant which will accommodate five hundred guests, rejoices in the sobriquet of "The Fried Cat." "The Boeur a la Mode," on Twenty-third street near Sixth avenue, is playfully alluded to as "The Cat's Meat Hall." Jauss's, which is the favorite of the Bohemians, is called the "Jausserie." Foucaud's is termed "The Stewed Kitten." Paul's has the attractive title of "The Fricassee Dog." Giroles's has the fantastic cognomen of "The Pig and Puppies," while Moretti's bears the unenviable distinction of being named "The Pig's Own."

bers of the association of '49ers, died a short time since worth $600,000, while the aggregate wealth of the paill-bearers was rated at $3,000,000.

These men give an annual dinner, at which no one but Californians are allowed to attend. The wines and fruits are brought from California, and the reunion is held at the Sturtevant House. Mr. Clark is organizing an excursion party of Californians to revisit their native State, and all who desire will have a chance to make the trip at a reasonable cost.

BRONCHITIS.

Acute Bronchitis.

This is an inflammation of the mucous membrane lining the bronchial tubes, and is one of the most common of all the pulmonary diseases. It is a dangerous disease, as it prevents the oxygenation of the blood, and in many cases, particularly after it passes into the chronic stage, the lungs become seriously involved giving rise to what is very properly called bronchial consumption. In the acute form there is a sense of constriction or pressure across the chest, with considerable wheezing, severe cough and expectoration. This is at first a watery mucus, which after a time becomes purulent. The patient in some cases is obliged to sit up in bed, the oppression across the chest is so great, and the skin is clammy and prostration rapidly sets in, and in fatal cases there will be muttering delirium, coma and death.

Chronic Bronchitis.

Chronic Bronchitis is also an inflammation of the mucous membrane of bronchial tubes. But this form more often occurs later in life. When a cold settles on the lungs, the disease either ends in bronchitis or pneumonia. If it ends in bronchitis it usually passes off as a cold in the chest, and still the patient does not feel entirely well. He feels tired and languid, and is incapable of taking his usual amount of exercise, and experiences a shortness of breath, with more or less of a cough, which appears, accompanied by an expectation of phlegm, followed by a little blood, loss of flesh and strength, and night sweats continue, when the patient assumes all the appearance of having a genuine case of consumption. But this is simply catarrh of the lungs, or chronic bronchitis.

In the later stages of the disease the mucous membrane of the larger bronchial tubes softens, while in the smaller tubes and cells of the lungs the mucous membrane becomes congested and inflamed. There are no cavities or tubercles in the lungs, but merely wasting away of the larger bronchial tubes, and death takes place from obstruction of the bronchial tubes and air cells of the lungs. The patient dies from exhaustion and suffocation, being unable to expectorate the mucous matter which accumulates in the passages leading to the lungs, which in some cases is sticky and small, and in others is greenish yellow. Oftentimes streaks of blood make their appearance in the mucus, and at times there is a bloody sputum. Persons thus afflicted are very liable to take cold, at which time the disease becomes clear and frothy, and it is not uncommonly the case that the patient dies of the disease. Inhalation is the only system which will cure these diseases, and yet the treatment of the two forms are entirely different. In the one we must allay the irritation, while in the other we must stimulate a healthy action.

This will convince us of the necessity of fully understanding the system of Medicated Inhalation in the treatment of the various diseases of the pulmonary organs, for when properly applied there is no system of medicine to be compared to it. Persons desiring treatment by this system should call on me, and I will give them as well as our office, and which will cause no inconvenience or hindrance from business whatever.

I have seen so many of these cases cured that I do not consider any case hopeless unless both lungs are seriously involved. Even then the inhalations are used in dissolving the mucus and in contracting and healing the cavities, which nothing can do with the same success.

The very best reference from those already cured.
